

Out & About with Lori Sunflower

If you could know one thing about the future, what would it be?

Alannah Godwin

Are we going to have a world where people live in community and in peace? That's really what I'm going after.

Ryan Garber

I would want to know the day the Earth would end.

Debbie Hart

When are we going to get our heads out of our asses and come together like it used to be, and have love, peace, harmony, fellowship and get-togethers?

Gratitude.

Just all of the above.

I would want to know if my prayer has been answered. And would you like to know the prayer? I woke up at Standing Rock one day with a prayer running through my head and it goes like this:

"Protect the protectors. Freeze the pipes and freeze the machines till they break. Protect the protectors. Grandfather Boulder, gather at the drill site. Protect the protectors. Animal Nation, rise in defense of your mother. Protect the protectors. Plant Nation, rise in defense of your mother. Protect the protectors. Magic Nation, rise in defense of your mother. Protect the protectors. Pristine air, water and soil for all." (That includes plants and animals.)

Will humanity follow its propensity towards greed, anger and ignorance or rise up to take the path of generosity, compassion and wisdom? Will we become the higher beings we were meant to be?

Craig Tomaski

It would be nothing. I would rather the future be exciting and fresh and unknown.

I would love to know that there is no cell tower in Crestone's future.
